Looking for a Career in Digital Marketing?

Are you creative and possess good analytical and computer skills? Do you have a good understanding of people? If you answered yes to either of these questions, a career in marketing may be an excellent choice for you.

Today, successful organizations are measured by their ability to identify and satisfy the needs of their target market in a highly competitive environment. The essential aims of marketing operations are to determine the needs of the market, translate these needs into products, services or ideas and convert the demand for them into a desired response. To be successful in this field, you will be required to understand customer needs, product development, communication and pricing strategy as well as where to market goods and services.

The rise in online retailing over the next few years will require expertise in digital presence, content production, and customer experience. Those pursuing a career in marketing research will be sought after as businesses become more and more competitive and the need for accurate and reliable data becomes crucial to giving companies that competitive edge.

As a marketing professional, you may be working in any of the following areas in for profit and non-profit organizations.

- Digital Marketing
- Marketing Research
- Community Management
- Brand or Product Marketing
- Customer Service Management
- Advertising
- E-Commerce

Careers in marketing not only include the corporate world but also are more and more prevalent in the non-profit area. These may include the arts, culture, education, community development, environmental groups, foundations, government, health and social services, international aid and registered charities.
