Prior background in the psychology of language, cognitive psychology, or linguistics is essential.

20. Rationale

The rationale behind the course is to give students the opportunity to focus on a topic in psycholinguistic research. In so doing, students will learn more about the larger field of psycholinguistics, the research process, oral presentations, and scientific writing. Given the intensive student participation and writing component of the course, it should be limited to 15 students.
