Research positions

Research Assistant and Co-author (July 2016-present)

Douglas Mental Health University Institute

Project: Moving from Custodial to Autonomous Housing: The Lived Experience of Residents and their Recovery from Serious Mental Illness

Principal Investigator: Dr. Myra Piat

Writing an article entitled (Em)placing Recovery: Sites of health(care) and wellness since moving into supported housing. This article addresses changes in the lives of individuals with serious mental health concerns who have recently moved into autonomous housing across various sites in Canada. My article uses photo elicitation methods and thematic analysis to discuss the notion of ‘therapeutic landscapes’, or the role of certain spaces and places in recovery processes.

Research Assistant (September 2012-present)

Department of Sociology, McGill University and Stonybrook University, NY

Project: Domestic Violence and related Legislation in Developing Countries

Principal Investigator: Dr. Kathleen Fallon

Currently co-authoring an article for a mixed-method study examining the political and social impact of domestic violence legislation in numerous developing countries participating in the 1995 World Conference on Women in Beijing.

Graduate Research Assistant (May 2012-present)

Department of Sociology, McGill University

Project: Transforming Social Policies: The Critical Mass of Women Legislators in Developing Countries

Principal Investigator: Dr. Kathleen Fallon

Participated in a mixed-method study utilizing both archival data and forthcoming qualitative in-depth interviews to examine the effects of democratization (specifically, an increase in women's legislative representation) on land tenureship claims and patterns in sub-Saharan Africa. Task included: collecting archival data on numerous sub-Saharan countries to examine the recorded history of land tenures; and cross-analyzing archival data with existing interview-based data.

Research Assistant (September 2013-January 2015)

Social Studies of Medicine/Biomedical Ethics, McGill University

Project: The Ethics of End-of-Life Care

Employers: Dr. Mary Macdonald and Dr. Jennifer Fishman

Position entailed the following duties: organizing data using AtlasTI QDA software and Excel, organizing and arranging team meetings, participant recruitment, initiating and maintaining contact with existing and potential stakeholders, interview coordination, and interview transcription.

Research Assistant (June 2013-August 2013)

Institute for the Study of International Development McGill University

Project:

Employer: Dr. Mary Picard

Contract position entailed the following duties: Coding and analyzing qualitative data utilizing qualitative data analysis software (Dedoose), analyzing data trends, compiling primary data and literature used in final presentation of findings, and meeting with contractor to discuss developing research themes and findings.

Undergraduate Research Assistant (June 2010-September 2010)

University of British Columbia Okanagan

Project: UBCO 2010 Sex/Love Survey

Supervisor: Dr. Nancy Netting

Participated in a longitudinal, quantitative sociological study analyzing the sexual attitudes, practices, and histories of local university students. Tasks included: distribution and collection of survey questionnaires, data compilation and entry, and preliminary data analysis using SPSS. Quantitative data were analyzed for: correlations between identity and sexual practices; age and sexual attitudes; issues concerning sexual health; and patterns of sexual behaviour. Contributed to the production of emergent articles.

Student Researcher (September 2009-April 2010)

Project: Gateway Mentoring Program Quality of Life Study

Principal Investigator: Dr. Shelley Pacholok (University of British Columbia-Okanagan)

Participated in a Community Service Learning project (partnered with John Howard Society) to determine the effectiveness of a community program in meeting the needs of clients affected by fetal alcohol spectrum disorder. Details of participation included: preparation of research materials and successful completion of tutorials necessary for ethics approval; creation and distribution of consent forms; creation of interview guides; conduction of interviews with both clients and mentors within the program; compilation of analytic memos; theory building; oral presentation of research findings; primary and secondary data analysis using qualitative data analysis software Hyperresearch®; and production of a formal findings report, used by an external evaluation committee for governmental funding purposes.

Undergraduate Research Assistant (May 2009-September 2010)

Department of Sociology

Project: Families in the New Millennium

Supervisors: Dr. Anne Gauthier, Canada Research Chair in Comparative Family Policy (University of Calgary); Dr. Shelley Pacholok (UBC-Okanagan)

Responsible for developing recruitment strategies and recruiting participants in a SSHRC-funded project exploring the socioeconomic ramifications of the economic crisis on middle-income families in various North American cities.

Conducted phone interviews and organized data for further analysis. Compiled and presented written and oral conference site reports, participating in several project-specific conferences held in Canmore, AB; Seattle, WA; and Montreal, QC. Held sole responsibility for transcription of in-depth qualitative interviews conducted at several sites. Developed competency in transcription software Express Scribe. Navigated and utilized qualitative analytical software Atlas.TI 6.0®, through primary and secondary coding of source material, preliminary theory building, and thematic grouping of data.
